

@Dharma Ramasamy

THE LION GAVE THE TIGER TEN WOLVES TO MANAGE... BUT THE WOLVES SOON TURNED AGAINST HIM.

@Dharma Ramasamy

The tiger divided the food equally...

1 share for itself, 1 for each wolf.

But the wolves wanted MORE.

@Dharma Ramasamy

Ten wolves united against the tiger.

Fairness couldn't save him.

@Dharma Ramasamy

The tiger begged the lion for help.

The lion said: 'Watch and learn.'

@Dharma Ramasamy

The lion took the biggest share for itself.

The wolves fought each other for the rest...

Ending up with less than before.

A detailed illustration of a pack of wolves. In the center, a large, brown and black wolf with intense yellow eyes looks directly forward. Surrounding it are several other wolves of similar coloration, some looking towards the center, others looking to the side. The background is a soft, golden-brown gradient.

@Dharma Ramasamy

Next day, the lion gave only 2 shares:

1 for itself, 1 for the wolves.

The strongest wolf took control...

And forced the rest to follow.

@Dharma Ramasamy

From then on...

The lion only needed to control the strongest wolf.

The wolf kept the others in line.

In society...

Those who rise to power aren't always gentle souls.

They understand human nature,

And how to control the crowd.

@Dharma Ramasamy

When power can't control
the crowd...

It lets the crowd turn on itself.

Found this helpful?

Like it to support

Share it with someone who needs this

Follow
Dharma Ramasamy
for more real-world
insights like these.

