LESSONS I WISH I KNEW AT THE START OF MY CAREER

1

Visibility matters as much as ability

- 👉 You could be amazing at what you do, but if no one knows about it, it doesn't count.
- 👉 Don't be afraid to showcase your achievements. Speak up and share your wins.

Your boss may or may not be your mentor

- 👉 A great boss can guide you, but your career growth is your responsibility.
- 👉 Have mentors outside your direct role and industry too. Different perspectives help.

Skills fade very quickly

- 👉 The skills that got you here won't keep you ahead.
- 👉 Keep learning. Stay curious. If it's "enough" today, it won't be tomorrow.

Don't chase job titles

- Chasing the next promotion is fine, but don't let your title define you.
- Focus on building skills, making an impact, and growing in ways that actually matter.

Praise isn't progress

- ➡ Getting compliments on your work is great, but are you getting better opportunities, responsibilities, or growth?
- ➡ If not, it's time to re-evaluate.

You can't avoid corporate politics

- Ignoring them doesn't make them disappear.
- Learn the rules, play smart, and stay ethical.

Dream jobs are built, not found

- 👉 Don't wait for the perfect opportunity. It doesn't exist.
- 👉 Bring your passion, create impact, provide value and enjoy the growth that comes along.

Paycheck is not everything

- 👉 The paycheck matters, but fulfillment and growth are priceless.
- 👉 Don't sell yourself short chasing numbers.

Stop waiting for permission

- 👉 No one's going to hand you opportunities or tell you when you're ready.
- 👉 Take risks. Speak up. Bet on yourself before anyone else does.
